IT was reported vesterday that Mr. WIBE does not intend to bold an inquiry into the origin of the fire which occurred on Sunday zat No. 9, Quecu's Road Central On strict reading of the law it would seem that his Worship may be correct in releasing the premises without an inquiry, but we have since heard that he has not yet announced his intention to do so. Section I of Ordinance 23 ing been hominated. Their names are:-Messrs. of 1888 provides that in cases of fire the Police shall make a report to the Magistrate furnishing all such information touching the one wand circumstances of the fire as they may be able to obtain and Section 2 the Magistrate, unless upon a consideration of the facts stated therein he is clearly of Mr. Wark and Mr. Rodger. The Victoria Reshall proceed to investigate the causes of the fire." In the present case there can be no! doubt the fire was caused by accident, and it | Nevertheless the case is one in which an recently from the neighbourhood declare that no and the foundaring vessel was probably greater inquiry would be desirable should the law permit of it. Some months ago a fire broke out estimate distances say it is about a mile and a in the same premises, but was promptly suppréssed without serious damage being done, and on Saturday last another outbreak occurred which was also suppressed, as was two outbreaks showed that there was some danger in the arrangement of the fireplaces State regulating the exceptions according to the or flues, and we understand that on Salur- advice of the local Councils. It appears that Satur- the benefit of the half-duty drawback the colonial day's fire must have continued smouldering products mentioned in table E imported into after it was supposed to have been suppressed, and developed into the conflagration which gutted the premises on Sunday morning. The owners in taking professional advice did all they could reasonably be expected to do for the preservation of their property, but looking at the case broadly the consideration that will suggest itself to most people is that after two such warnings as had been given a third fire ought not to have been allowed to occur. An official inquiry would slaw "whether there was part of any of the couplers, their servants, or other partie or whether the fire originated in a way fat could not reasonably have been foresen. The chief use of fire inquiries is to prvent incondiarism by increasing the probability of detection, and in this the Ordinano passed in 1888 has could have expectel; but such inquiries are also attended by minor advantages in We observe that a chain gang is at work on the way of bringing to light unsuspected the new building sites above Kennedy Road. may conceivably had to the prevention of had to be abandoned on account of escapes. other; fires under similar circumstances. That the Ordinana should provide for inquiries only in cass where the circumstances do not preclude the suspicion of incendiar- charged with drunkenness and disorderly ism, if such be the correct reading of the law, seems therefore to be a defect in that otherwise useful measure.

SHANSI NOTES.

I am informed that the stories about foreigneradigging out the eyes of children and using them for medicine, and other slanderous reports, are having considerable run just now now in this province. It is difficult to understand how even

Chinese can believe such tales. Placards were put up at Taiyunn Fu. calling upon the people to assemble on the third of the eleventh month and destroy the foreign residences. These avil notices were quickly torn It is highly improbable that any serious trouble will come to the foreign residents in this province. The Shansi people do not take to rioting as readily as do their fellow countrymon at the South. There is no doubt a great deal of ill-feeling here, but hitherto it has manifested rtself by giving us "the cold shoulder" instead of a shower of brickbats. The proprietor of a Tientsin store at Taku

One of them was quickly bought by a wealthy man, for an ornament; but the other is still on hand. It is too much to expect that a Chinaman would be the first to break through the customs of his country by riding in one of them. Perhans some time in the distant future the roads will be so improved that the foreigners will be able to show what is possible in this respect. The Chinese say that earthquake shocks are experienced here about once in ten years. The present year has been exceptional, as five distinct shocks have been felt. The heavi-st was in the spring of the year; in which it is estimated that upwards of a hundred persons were killed. On the lifteenth of October two shocks were felt at

The study of Shakespeare is having a great revival in Germany. The German Shakespoore Society, whose headquarters are at Weimer, has several distinguished members, among whom are the Emperor, the Grand Duke of Baden and the Prince Regent of Bavaria.

Mark Twain, when recently in Germany, re ceived marked attention in Berlin. His portrait has been printed in the daily and weekly papers: long articles upon his life and works have been written, and numerous accounts have been given of his fabulous wealth.

 M. Stepanni proposes to erect a Moorial palace at the World's Fair at Chicago. One of the many attractions which he prop ses to exhibit in this palace is $1,000,000 in gold onin in one pile, a sight which he believes nearly every visitor will want to see:

The digestion of a boy is not quite so strong as the digestion of an estrich—a bird which is Banks eard, perhaps untruly, to be partial to a diet of tenpenny nails -- but is very nearly so. The few things that a robust schoolboy will not eat for pleasure he is generally ready to eat for a wager; and a story comes from Cardiff of a little hero who lately bolted fifty-three marbles for a bet. After he had fin shed his meal he went on with the game he was playing; but his friends, whether noticing that he rattled or feeling apprehensive upon general grounds, had him removed to the infirmary, where he is at present. The Brown & Co., H. We are threatened, we see, with a fresh disoussion by Mr. Besant and others upon the rewards and honours due from the State to literature. In this connection some remarks made by Lord Rosebary in his " Pitt " are not without interest. "More Miltons," he save, "have remained mute and inglorious under the suffocation of wealth than under the frosts of panury. Pensionless poetry may at least bear comparison with that which has flourished upon bonuties. Under the chill rays of Pitt, we had Burns, Wordsworth, Cowper, Southey, Scott, Coleridge, Canning, Crabbe, Joanna Baillie, Royers; and even under the tropical effusion of £1,200 a year. dispersed in heat drops of £50 or £100 apiece. we have had nothing conspicuously superior." "Nothing," he says again, "is so difficult as for a Parliamentary Government to encourage literature. It may begin by encouraging a Shak-

The Dake of Portland has at length been deposed from the head of the list of winning owners on the turf, a position he occapied in the three seasons preceding that which has just been brought to a close. His winnings in stakes alone during that period amounted to nearly £126,000, showing an average of £42,000. whereas this year his total only reaches a little Wehai Warch'se Co. over £5,000. In place of vast sums being placed Watson & Co., A. S. to the credit of one patricien owner, honours -very doubtful honours-have been more evenly divided. Mr. Noel Fenwick now occupies first place with £20,519, and is closely pressed by Colonel North with £20,118. Next in order come Mr. H. Milner, of "all scarlet" fam , with £13.311, Mr. Blundell Maple with £12,640, Sir New Malwa $490 with £10,931. The noble Duke's winnings on Older Malwa 8530 the turf for a single season have thus amounted Oldest Malwa $540 school planes which have caused him so much

A few mornings since, on a Field correspondeat visiting his poultry at eight o'clock to feed them, he found that out of twenty-six birds twenty-one had disappeared since 5 p.m. the previous evening. The natural conclusion was that they had been stolen; an examination of the ground did not disclose any footmarks, but did show scratches of the claw of a dog. A large quantity of feathors were strewn about the run and in an adjoining field. Had the occurrence bean far away in the country, one would bave said at ouce that a for was the culprit. but the proximity of the place to London precluded the possibility of such a visitor. Lator in the day the trail of feathers was followed up to a spinney about a quarter of a mile away, where, lying in an exhausted condition in the bushes with feathers around him, was a young bloodhound. It appears that this hound, which is eighteen months old, broke loose two days previously, and had not been recovered. It was captured and taken to its owner, and then a search began for the fewls, for it was impossible that he could have eaten twenty-one. During that and the following day no less than fifteen fowls were found buried in the spinney and in the ditches, under the trees, and in dung heaps in several of the neighbouring fields-most skilfully buried too. Each bird that the writer saw was lying on its back with its head turned down by its side. Places could be seen where the hound had scratched, but, finding the ground too hard, had passed on elsewhere. The distances traversed from the fowl-house to each spot where the birds were found was, on the average, a quarter of a mile. Assuming the hound took one bird at a time, this gives some idea of how hard and deliberately he must have worked. It appears that each bird had been bitten across the back, the hound's teeth having penetrated deeply into the body. The natural instinct of the animal to hunt at night and to sleep by day, and to lay up food, seems to have shown itself in a marked degree.

THE NEBRASKA LOADSTONE.	Į
If there was one man in college whom the Majah thoroughly and heartily detested, it was the Captain of the Boat Club. He had many faults; he was very talk and powerful, and de- lighted in contracting the English physique	}.
with that of inferior races; by which he meant,	1
among others, the Rajah's race. His manner was abrupt and overbearing, his laugh loud and nnmusical. In fact, he grated horribly on the	١.,
Rajah; and it was merely the final straw when,	Ti in the exhibitation of a bump supper—full, as the Rajah remarked in disgust, of cow and strong drink—he called that gentleman in playful chaff	, a "nigger." The Rajah swore melodiously in Hindustani, and I have that he meant to be revenged. In those days the entertainment	Н.
of the Nebraska Londstone created a furore	•
Everybody went to see her, and everybody bame away convinced that she possessed	ŀ marvellous powers. Her peculiar gift—but	:
everybody remembers the details of the per-	H
formance, and how the tricks were finally, one	ı1
by one, exposed, so that her adherents and	ر ل believers were driven from one position to another, until at last they had to fall back on one single performance out of all those that the	'
Loadstone gave, and maintain that on that	'
occasion at least something unexplained and	lı
. inexplicable did really happen. It is with the	1
events of that particular evening that I am con-	. [' cerned. I think I can throw some light on them. At first, however, there were many them. At first, however, there were many believers and few scoptiss. The Dean carefully pointed out that Plate newhere denied	1
. the existence of odio force; and the Bur-
ear, who was generally approped to be little bet-	1
than an atheist, declared that Spencer in one	11
passage impliedly asserted it; even the Warden, in his sermon, told us that it was better, accord-	1
ing to Bacon, to believe two errors than refuse	1
one truth-which was, to say the least of it,	1
and the state of t

sitting on the fence. But none of these authorities shock the robust scepticism of the Captain of the Boat Club. He knew a conjuror, and the conjurer had told him how it was done. and he was going to expose the Loadstone. "But why haven't you p" 1 urged. "She's been here a week. "He will not be too bard on her at first," said the Rayah with a little eneer. "I'll bus her up this very night," said Waterer. "I would have done it before, only I

The excuse was good, and Waterer departed. NO. 5, WEST TERF full of beastings and self-confidence, to gather Immediate entry. together a large number of the noisy men, and make a pleasant party to "guy" the unhappy Loadstone. I stayed to smoke a pipe with the Rajoh. "Of course she's a fraud," said he; "and I believe that animal really has got held of the right explanation." "I shall go and see it," I announced. After a moment's sileut smoking the Rajah looked up with a twinkle in his eye. "So shall Floor, I—if niggers are admitted."

After Hall, he and I set out together for the Town Hall. We found the first two rows of stalls occupied by Waterer and his friends. They were all in evening dress and had obviously dined-not in Hall. The Rajah and I seated ourselves just behind them. The room was full, and the feats were being most successful; each was followed by general applause, broken only by some gibes from our friends in front. These latter grew so pronounced that the Loadstone's manager at last came forward and pointedly in. Court Water laid on. vited one of the scoffers to submit himself to experiment.

'Now was Waterer's chance. He rose in the majesty of his bulk, walked on to the platform, and said in a loud voice, as he settled himself on a chair, "If the lady can move me one foot from this chair, I'll give her a pony!"

The Leadstone advanced and hegan to paw him about in her usual fashion. Waterer, who was sober enough to have lost nothing but his shyness, was apparently too many for her. He was immoveable; and cries of "Now then! when are you going to begin ?" and so on became audible. Two or three minutes passed, and the Loadstone turned with a gesture of despair towards her manager. "Loan't she began.

Finmped to my feet, crying, "Wait a minute For even as she spoke, there was what is scientifically called a solution of continuity between Waterer and his chair. Still in a sitting posture, but sitting on nothing, he was at least two linehes from the wickerwork of the chair. I glanced from him to the Rajah. That extraordinary man was in deep, placid, profound slumber. I jogged his albow and pinched his arm; he showed no consciousness whatever. I look ed at the Loadstone: She was standing motionless on the stage, about a yard from Waterer, with one hand outstretched towards him and her eyes fixed on his ascending figure: for Waterer was gradually, slowly, steadily meanting in his strange journey He was now a foot from his chair, still in a sitting position—and up, up, up was going. The wretch was white as a sheet and gasping with fright and bewilderment. Thunders of applause burst from the audience. It was again and again renewed; but the Loadstone did not, as her custom was, bow and smile in response. She still stood motionless, and Waterer still ascended. At last, at a height of fully twenty feet from the stage, he stopped. Simultaneously the Load- No. 13, PRAYA CENTRAL. stope gave a loud-shriek as she fell back into the arms of the manager—and the Rajah awoke.

"I beg your pardon," he s id politely; "I was drowsy. Anything going on P" "No; he's stopped now." I answered, my eyes eagerly fixed on Waterer.

The Rajah rose from his seat with a yawn, "There'll be nothing more to night," he said. " Let's go home." 🛴 " Go home, man le-with that before our eyes!"

The Rajah shrugged his shoulders. "She won't do anything more," he repeated. "Look at her; she's quite done up." And, indeed, the Loadstone looked half-dead as she gazed fearfully up at Waterer. Her de-meanour was not that of a triumphant performer. "Do sit down," I urged, "we must see the end of it."

With a weary sigh the Rajah sat down, say ing, "I'm not sure you will, you know."
While we talked the audience graw impatient. However wonderful a leaf may to. the public likes to have things kept maving. They thought Waterer had been in the air long though, and there were cries of "That'll b! Let him down!"

The manager held a hasty conference with the Loadstone: he seemed to arge her; but she shook her head again, and again, and would do LAVENSHILL," on the ROBINSON nothing but lie back in a chair and pass her ROAD, lately in the occupation of C. nothing but lie back in a chair and pass her hand to and fro over her head. The Rajah D. Harman, Esq., 6 Rooms, 3 Bath and Dress. looked at her with a slight smile. The clamour ing Rooms, &c. increased. I think a sort of paniq-an angry panic-seized the audience. "Bring him down! Bring him down!" they oried pointing to the pallid Waterer, who sat as rigid as a trussed forl. Af er another despairing appeal to the Loadstone, the manager came forward and made a iams speech. The Londstone, was exhausted with her unparalleled exertions. She must rest; presently she would bring him down. Then Waterer's friends arose and ascended; the platform. They walked about, they stood on one another's shoulders; they made it clear that no cords held Waterer. A pair of at ps mas called for and brought. Placed on a stordy table, they just enabled a man to reach Waterer's feet One mounted amidst intense excitement. Turning to the Rajah, I exclaimed, "Look!"

He was asleep again; and the Loadstone stood stiffly upright, beckening towards Waterer. Blowly and gradually he descended, leaving the man on the ladder grasp ng at empty air, till he ant again on his cent. The applance burst out, and the Loadstone sank back in a faint on the floor. The Hajah awoke, and the manager drop. Rooms). ped the curtain, hiding the Loadstone, Waterer, and his friends from our view.

"Give me your arm," said the Rajah; "I am tired " I escorted him to a caband we drove home. The Loadstone gave no performance the next evening; she was too fatigued; and Waterer was absent from the boat and from the sight of men two days. When he reappeared he made to OUSES at the PEAK and at BELILIOS no reference to his friend the conjugar.
